These words were written by some humans you probably won't remember. Memory is strange. Still. Part of us got to hang close to your heart. For a little while. It seemed like an appropriate place for these words. Somewhere. Before any of this words words had any meaning. They were all a dream. Then they were a little more than a dream. Then they were something you could walk into. Something you could wear. Some saw it before it had a shape. Some kept it from falling while it was still learning to stand. That was Typesense. That was Libre Space Foundation. Some answered every time the dream called their name. That was the Geeko Foundation. Some lent it a small piece of the world to dream in. That was UniWA. Some carried it through 18 trips around the sun. That was GFOSS. Some wore it close to their heart. Some are holding this card right now. Reading these words. That was you. That is you. Thank you. For coming. For staying. For dreaming this with us. For a little while. The dream is getting quieter now. Soon you will return to the waking world. You won't go empty handed. A piece of this dream is already in your hands. Who knows. You might be reading this years from now. Long after this dream ended. If that is now. Hello. We hope life has been kind. We hope you kept a piece of the dream alive. Take a deep breath. There is so much left for you to create. Go make something that outlasts you.

Made with love. - Humans of FOSSCOMM <3
